Welcome tag - with guest wifi password

Welcome tag - with guest wifi password

Over the summer we have had quite a few house guests, which is one of my favorite things.

I usually have a basket with tooth brushes, shampoo and such things in case an overnight guest arrives without one of these items. This summer I decided to tighten up that situation and make a guest tray with these items and more importantly with a coordinating look.

This guest tag is the first item that I made for my new guest tray. There are three more items that will get each their own post and then a final post with the guest tray all put together. I can't wait to share it with you.

If you follow me on Instagram you may have seen a sneak peek of the toothbrush case that I will also be sharing.

Here is my take on a guest tag with our guest WiFi password on the back.

I used this cardstock and set my dial to Fabric. then I cut out 6 tags.

I got some really nice black and white striped ribbon from World Marked of all places. I cut a piece of about 3 1/2 inches and put though the slit of the tab. Then I secured it with a mini brad. I used my seam ripper to make a hole for the brad to pass through.

(Note on the PDF version I left out the slit. That way you can print out the tag with the word printed on it and use a punch to make a hole for the ribbon.)

That is pretty much it. Oh and then I printed out our guest wifi info onto a sticker and added it to the back of the tag.

Obscured for privacy but you get the idea.
